Number of Participants: 89

Short description:

The workshop “Solar, Wind Power and Mini Wind Turbines: the most common technologies for energy from renewable sources” was held on 25th May as part of “Energethica, Sustainable Energy on Show” (Fiera del Mare, 25th, 26th, 27th May 2006).

Background:

The development of green electricity in Liguria is focused on small scale RES-e and nowadays there are concrete opportunities for renewable sources. The actual technological and financial instruments make the most common renewable sources applicable in most cases.

Aim & programme:

The seminar that attracted people from different target groups focused on the opportunities of renewable sources in our region. The workshop was opened by Roberto Longo (President of APER – Association of Producers of Energy from Renewable Sources), who highlighted the main issues concerning distributed generation. Alex Sorokin an expert on renewable energy then presented the legislative situation in Italy and Europe. Hermann Scheer described the German scenario of green electricity; his contribution was very important for the comparison of the Italian experience with that of other European countries. The seminar was also an interesting occasion during which the RES-e project and the strategies for the future of green electricity in our region were presented to a wide public. Franco Zunino, who is the Regional Assessor for the Environment, highlighted the interest of our region in achieving concrete targets in the exploitation of renewable sources at the close of the day's proceedings. The workshop also gave us a deep insight into the latest developments in the energy market and specifically on PV, both concerning technological (Pier Paolo Rossodivita's speech on "The integration of solar energy in architecture") and financial aspects.

The programme of the seminar was as follows:
